In the context of globalization and increased competition throughout the world, there is a steady trend towards the emergence and strengthening of economic cooperation in the Eurasian space. Considering the ongoing crisis phenomena in the global financial and economic system, integration processes are becoming even more relevant and significant. Groups of states united by common interests and tasks operate more successfully in the global economy, gaining real competitive advantages.

Given the fact that the Eurasian space occupies a unique geo-economic position, it is the Eurasian integration processes that largely determine the current conditions for the development of the world economy. Eurasian countries can become the new main locomotive of the world economy. The territory of Eurasia is huge, therefore, in order to facilitate logistics, trade and other economic processes, it is necessary to create the most unified regulatory systems for all areas of economic activity, common digital and logistics platforms.

India is one of the key and promising partners. The potential for development in the trade and economic sphere is enormous. India's economy is among the fastest growing in the world - according to the IMF forecast, India's GDP will grow by 7.4% in 2023. India is a member of more than 2,000 international organizations out of 6,000 currently existing in the world.

India's attitude towards multilateral organizations in Eurasia is an important component as they affect its security and economic development. Moreover, due to the lack of a single comprehensive security structure in Eurasia, India is forced to develop relations with many multilateral organizations in the economic sphere.

The joint search for new solutions and the development of strategies, the strengthening and development of mutual contacts will undoubtedly contribute to unlocking the huge potential of Greater Eurasia and the formation of a general atmosphere of trust on the continent.

Issues for discussion:

- formation of a single Eurasian space;
- ways of effective interaction in the field of trade regulation on the Eurasian continent;
- support for commodity and investment flows, technological and industrial cooperation in the territory of Eurasia;
- building transport and logistics links on the Eurasian continent;
- formation of a general atmosphere of trust between business and government in the Eurasian space;
- creation of a postal Eurasian union;
- free trade zones on the Eurasian continent;
- food security.

Tourism and the hospitality industry are an important tool for the socio-economic development of the territories, making a significant contribution to the growth of the welfare of the local population, the creation of new jobs, the formation of favorable conditions for doing business, and the increase in budget revenues. Tourism contributes to the formation of economic and cultural ties between peoples and states, contributes to the stability of international relations.

Modern challenges facing humanity require the transformation of international tourism, considering the interests of future generations. Otherwise, all positive effects are offset by environmental pollution and climate threats, the risks of losing cultural and historical heritage and the growth of social tension from over-tourism. The sustainable development of tourism provides a balance of environmental-climatic, socio-cultural and economic goals.

The tourism forum is aimed at the disclosure of world tourism.

Issues for discussion:

- challenges, opportunities and limitations of international tourism integration in modern conditions;
- transformation of international tourist flows in the context of global transformations;
- international experience in ensuring the safety of tourism;
- changes in consumer preferences, transformation of the tourism business and support for national tourism products;
- government regulation of tourism and support for national tourism products.
- tourism business insurance
